

Balancing Acts: Youth Culture in the Global City

Posted on October 6, 2011

Balancing Acts: Youth Culture in the Global City, by Natasha Kumar Warikoo, University of California Press, 2011

This comparative study of children of immigrants in New York and London looks at the links between rap/hip-hop influenced youth culture and the motivation for educational success. The author uses ethnographic, survey and interview data to examine the balancing acts performed by these children between peer influences and school achievement.

Tweet

This entry was posted in Research Network, Research Network Relevant Publications. Bookmark the permalink.

← Paris: From Barbès to Hermès

Radio In Africa: Politics, Cultures, Communities →