Macedonian President, George Ivanov, during his speech in the conference "Facing tomorrow 2011" being held in Jerusalem, said that religious communities in Macedonia have all the rights and freedoms.

"Multiethnic democracy is never a closed issue and always will be facing new challenges, but I strongly believe that our model is the model of the future," Ivanov said.

Director of the Institute for Peace, "Harry Truman" from Hajber University in Jerusalem, Naama Shpatar said that Macedonian model of integration without assimilation, is an example from which other societies must learn. /albeu.com/
