

Faith Shorts 2011 shortlist revealed!

Posted 12 August

Faith not only means different things to different people all over the world, it is expressed in different ways.

This was reflected beautifully in the submissions for the Faith Shorts 2011 competition - from a teenager in Northern England exploring the true meaning of Islam to a student from New Delhi sharing her inspiration for her faith. Not to mention the Baha'i students in Ontario, Canada, who entered the musical category with a rap, and these are just a handful!

After much debate and deliberation, we've announced the shortlist for the Faith Shorts 2011 competition. See which films made it here:

<http://www.tonyblairfaithfoundation.org/see-the-shortlist>

We've been incredibly moved by stories about faith motivating and empowering young filmmakers from across five continents - from the US, Lebanon, Australia, India and Singapore.

This competition gives young people between the ages of 14-18 the chance to express what their faith means to them, and the opportunity to start changing the world. As the Rt Hon Tony Blair, Founder and Patron of the Tony Blair Faith Foundation, says:

"By gaining insights into the lives of young people across the world, this competition has the potential to build bridges across cultural and religious divides."

It's been an honour to watch so many inspiring films tackling the prejudice and stereotypes that surround religion. Now we're excited to share with you the shortlist of 13 films filled with conviction and hope.

Take a look at the Faith Shorts 2011 shortlisted film now:

<http://www.tonyblairfaithfoundation.org/see-the-shortlist>

Enjoy and stay tuned in coming months as we pick a winner!

The Faith Shorts team

Find the latest news from the Tony Blair Faith Foundation on:

